The article offers a lexicosemantic analysis of an understudied Rhodope dialect spoken in the village of Breze, in the Devin region, and compares it with other Rhodope dialects. The study identifies several main thematic groups in the collected lexical material and examines the origins of the included lexemes. Additionally, it explores instances of synonymy and polysemy observed in the dialect.

Keywords: lexicosemantic characterisation; Rhodope dialects; dialectology; Bulgarian language
