The article presents names for the elements of the Rhodope men's traditional clothing, excerpted from various ethnographic, regional historical and dialectological studies, as well as from the author's personal archive. A brief ethnographic and lexico-semantic description of the dialect empirical material is made. The authors go on to examine lexical lines with two or more heteronyms, phonetic and word-forming variants, manifestations of heterosemy, as well as the etymology of some of the names of foreign and domestic origin.
